THE Milwaukee Commercial, a most incompromising Democratic paper, in in article headed "Why William Allen lid not rise up," states its conclusion in this forcible style: "The encouragement to the formation of a national inflation party which would have been aforded by the victory of the rag money party in Onio would have been so desided, and the consequences to the pubde credit from every extension of this nergsy are so disastrous, that honest reople have united without regard to party to stamp it out."

UNLESS speculators have manipulated reports so as completely to deceive we may expect higher prices for coffee during the coming year. The crop everywhere appears to have been a short one, and great anxiety concerning the supply is manifested. A communication in the New York Journal of Commerce, which the editor of that paper indorses as "coming from a very respectable source," reviews the prospects at some length and gives us interesting stausics to justify the conclusion to which he arrives. This article says "the crop of Jaya, which last year was 1,126,000 piculs of 186 fbs. each, is this year between 500,000 and 550,000 piculs. The crop of Rio coffee last year was 4,250,000 bags of 132 hs. each, and together with 250,000 bags left in Brazil of the previous crop, gave a supply of four and half million bags, while this year the crop is barely 1,500,000 bags, making with about 800,000 bags of the previous crop left over, a supply of 2 300,000 bags. The islands near Java have also produced a smaller crop, so that the falling off is in all 2,776,000 bags, or about fitty per cent. The effect of this scarcity has already been felt and within the past thirty days considerable advances have been made in prices both in this country and in the European markers. It looks just now as if we might reasonably expect a moderate return of the days of burnt rye and chickory.

FROM THE CAPITAL.

Dangers of Black and White-Several Kinds of Veracity-The Great Pokerist and his friend the Great Confidence Man-Printing Documents-Ohio.

Correspondence of the Star. WASHINGTON, Oct. 15, 1875.

Black and white is the rock upon which the Tweed dynasty in the city of New York was shipwrecked. Having come into power under certain pre-established book-keeping conditions which it could not saiely disregard, it was placed at the disadvantage of being compelled to sophisticate its accounts in order to obscure the eccentricities of its transactions. But even a falsified record is unsafe; affording, as it may, the data upon which investigations may be founded and damaging inquiries predicated. The Board of Public Works of the city of Washington, directed by a finer instinct or placed in a more favorable state of circumstances, or both together, did better. Having inherited no ancestral ledgers, it found it for its advantage not to open any; and its few memoranda were principally kept with a view to the proper division of the profits that accrued. But even these have proved themselves a source of peril to one of its in dividuals; and, after months of scrutiny into the exuvise of the late Treasurer, an expert has discovered a place where twenty-six thousand dollars and up-wards went into his hands, without being able to ascertain the avenue through which it emerged. Such a trifle, consid-ering the immeusity of the shorts in the general fiscal condition that remain un general fiscal condition that remain un-covered, is hardly deserving of remark except for the purpose of contrasting great things with little. Nevertheless, notice has been served upon the reticent ex-official and his sureties, with a press-ing invitation to call and settle. It is one of those instances of incoming one of those instances of incaution which the confidence resulting from sucess will now and then beget even in the EMOTIONAL VERACITY. John W. Wright, as the "next friend" of Charles G. Fisher, late Assistant Attorney for the District, charged with the purfoining of records, the compromising or felonies, and with procuring the re-EVERYBODY is having his say about lease of offenders by means of sham settle causes that led to the election of curities, petitions for a writ of habeas corpus ad subjictendum, that the mental corpus as supicceaum, that he had be condition of the said Fisher may be inquired into; alleging that he is now, and for a long time past has been, of unsound mind, "to such a degree as to render him criminally irresponsible for his acts." They who know the parties are inclined to look upon the choice of the actuary in this proceeding as one of the most remarkable cases of natural selection that ever came to their knowledge.

CONSTITUTIONAL VERACITY. It is a most interesting fact in the pheiomena of human gravitation, that all the great liars I ever knew in my life-I do not mean common liars, but such as by the force of native genius, carry lying though there are some amateurs of undicial; though there are some amateurs of under the ballon would descend within thirty and repeated one hundred times in a recent account in the Herald of a pigeon shooting match.

THE GREAT AMERICAN POKERIST.

In its article on poker the New American Cylciopedia cites Gen. Schenck, if his reputation does not belle him, can not be code of instructions upon that provided the five arts. Gen. Schenck, if his of the five arts. Gen. THIRST IN CONNECTICUT.

An examination of the vote upon the liquor question, at the late election in derly; Connecticut, shows majorities for "itwhere there is very little. This ments, where there is very little. This would seem to indicate that thirst, in Connecticut, increases in an inverse proportion to the square of the distance between the human particles.

THE GREAT AMERICAN CONFIDENCE MAN. It is spoken of socially here, as an incident, that Col. Donn Piatt, of the Capital newspaper, who is now in or about London, did not attend his wife to Paris, o which city she has gone to be treated for a nervous difficulty. This is thought remarkable for two reasons: First, because the gallant Colonel is a very uxorious gentleman-of superior domes-ucity; and second, because there are so many people in Paris wao are anxious to see him. Probably no American who ever resided at the French Capital left behind him a more vivid impression; probably there are none whose return would be more distinctly sensational. Without doubt, this omission is the ef-fect of great self-denial on his part, and occasion of an equal measure of disappointment on that of his Gallican admirers. The loss to the readers of the Capital is altogether incalculable.

PRINTING NEW DOCUMENTS.

The suggestion of the printing of the new documents—a complete and orderly collection, so far as they have been preserved, of all the papers, orders, reports and dispatches relating to military organization and operations—was first made to the Committee on Military Afairs, by Gen. Boynton, the able and careful correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette. These documents now fill a large building, the destruction of which by fire, would be an irreparable calamity. Two of these large octavo volumes are printed, and the work, when completed, will reach nearly or quite an hundred, is going on at moderate speed. When it is remembered that several unaccountable disappearances of important papers have occurred, and that in these documents is contained the real history of the war, the desirableness of this measure will be apparent. It was said by John Adams, about the beginning of the century, that the history of the American revolution had never been written, and that the materials for such a history so she awakened her brother, and told nad disappeared. It is to be hoped that, in respect to the late conflict, the documents will be preserved until such time as will admit of that impartiality which can only arrive when the prejudices and resentments that now retain their influence are forgotten. Gen. Boynton has been of late rather an attentive student of these fugitive pieces, the result of which will doubtless appear in his forthcoming volume. It is proper to mention that, as far as is practicable, the volumes will contain the war documents of the Confederacy, and that measures to that end are being industriously prosecuted.

OHIO VS. WASHINGTON. For a few hours on Thursday, Allen was the favorite son of Onio, and the faces of Republicans who had casually mentioned hats, and oyster-suppers and other comfortables in connection with the result increased in the longitudinal dimension. Except, therefore, in the case of those particularly-knowing individuals who bet on ten, fifteen, twenty, and from that up to forty, fitty and sixty thousand majority for Hayes, things are more cheerful. From the figures as they stand this morning, it would be a safe bet to make that the people of Obio might try an hundred times and not come again as near a draw-game as they did on Tuesday.

CHILDREN IN THE CLOUDS.

A True Story from "All the Year Round." One pleasant afternoon during the comet's appearance, some ten years ago, an aeronaut, after a prosperous voyage, descended upon a large farm in the neighorhood of a large farm market town in one of the Western States. He was soon surrounded by a curious group of the farmer's family and laborers, all asking eager questions about the voy-age and the management of the balloon. That, secured by an anchor and a rope yoyin the hands of an aeronaut, its car but a foot or two above the ground, was sway-ing lazily backward and forward in the evening air. It was a good deal out of wind, and was a sleepy and innocent monster in the eyes of the farmer who. with the owner's permission, led it up to his house, where, as he said, he could "hitch it" to the fence. But before he thus secured it his three children, aged respectively 10, 8 and 3, begged him to left them into that big basket, that they might sit on those pretty red cushions.

While the attention of the aeronaut was diverted by more curious questionwas diverted by more than the fatter that the darlings one by one into the car. Chubby little Johnny proved the cunce too much for the aerial camel, and brought him to the ground; and then, unluckyily, not the baby, but the eldest hope of the family was litted out. The relief was too great for the monster. The voiatile creature's spirits rose at once, he jerked the halter out of the larmer's hand, and with a bound mounted into the air. Vain was the aeronaur's anchor. It caught for a moment in the fence, but tore away, and was off dangling uselessly after the runaway balloon, which so swiftly and steadily rose that in a few minunes those two little faces peerlar over the edge of the car grew inpeering over the edge of the car grew in-distinct, and those pitcous cries of "Papa!" "Maca!" grew fainter up in

When distance and twilight mists had swallowed up voices and faces, and nothing could be seen but that dark, cruel shape, sailing triumphantly away with its precious booty, like an aerial privateer, the poor father sank down helpiess and speechless, but the mother, frantic with grief, still stretches her yearning arms toward the heavens, and called wildly up into the unanswering void.

The aeromant strove to console the that the eider cand might step out, leaving the younger in the bailoon. Then it might lise and continue its voyage.

"Ah, no!" replied the mother, "Jenny would never stir from the car without Johnny in her arms."

The balloon passed directly over the market town, and the children seeing many people in the streets stretened out their hands and called loudly for help.

But the villagers, though they saw the bright little heads, heard no call.

When the sunlight all went away, and the great comet came blazing out, little Johnny was apprehensive that the comet quilitzed, but he soon wrapped it about the child, saying ten-

"Why, now can I say my prayers before I have my supper?" asked little Johnny. "Sister hasn't any supper for you or

"sister hasn't any supper for you or herself, but we must pray all the narder," selemnly responded Jennie.
So the two baby wanderers, nione in the wide heavens, unawed by darkness, immensity and silence, by the presence of the great comet and the millions of unpitying stars, lifted their little clasped hands and sobbed out their sorrowful hands and sobbed out their sorrowful supplementary prayer:

"Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray the Lord my soul to keep; It I should die before I wake, I pray the Lord my soul to take." "There! God heard that easy; for we are close to him up here," said innocent ittle Johnny.

Doubtless Divine Love stooped to the little ones, and folded them in perfect peace, for soon the younger, sitting on the bottom of the car, with his head leaning against his sister's knee, slept as soundly as though he were lying in his own little bed at home; while the elegy watched quietly through the long.

his own little bed at home; while the elder watched quietly through the long, long hours, and the car floated gently on the still night air, till it began to sway and rock on the fresh morning wind.

At length a happy providence guided the little girl's wandering hand to a cord connecting with the vaive; something told her to pull it. At once the balloon began to sink, slowly and gently, as though let down by gentle hands, or as though some celestial pilot guided at through the wild currents of air, not letting it drop into fakes or rivers, leafy wood or impenetrable swamp, where this strange, unchildlike experience might have been closed by a death of unspeakable horror; but causing it to de-might have been closed by a death of un-speakable horror; but causing it to de-scend as a bird alights, on a spot where care and human pity awaited it.

The sun had not yet risen, but the morning twilight had come, when the little girl, looking over the edge of the car, saw the dear old earth coming nearer—"rising toward them," she said. But when the car stopped, to her great about disappointment, it was not on the ground, but caught fast in the topmost branch of a tree. Yet she saw they were near a house whence help might soon come, so she awakened her brother, and told him the good news, and together they watched and waited for deliverance, busying case other for low and years.

more. So at last he awoke his wife and said: "It's no use; I'll just get up and dress, and have a look at the comet." The next she heard was a frightened summons to the door. It seems that no sooner did he step from his house than his eyes fell on a strange shape hanging his eyes fell on a strange shape hanging in a large pear tree about twenty yards distant. He could see in it no likeness to anything earthly, and he half fancied it might be the comet, who, having put out his lights, had come down there to petch. In this tright and perplexity he did what every wise man would do in like extremity. Reinforced by her he drew near the tree cautiously reconnoidrew near the tree cautiously reconnoi tering. Surely, never pear tree bore such fruit! Suddenly there descended from the thing a plaintive, trembling little voice, "Please take us down. We are vou? The first little voice said: "We are Mrs. Horwood's little boy and girl, and we are lost in a balloon."

The second little voice said: "It's us.

and we runned away in a balloon.

Please take us down."

Dimly comprehending the situation, the farmer, getting hold of a daugling rope, succeeded in pulling down the balloon. He first lifted out little Johnny, who ran rapidly a few yards towards the house, then turned round and stood for a few moments, curiously surveying the balloou. The faithful little sister was so chilled and exhausted that she had to be carried into the house, where, trem-bling and sobbing, she told her wonder-ful story. Before sunrise a mounted messenger was sent to the Harwood home, with the glad tidings of great joy. the reached it in the afternoon, and a lew hours later the children them-selves arrived in state with banners, and conveyed in a covered hay wagon and four. Joy bells were rung in the neighboring town, and in the farmer's brown house the happiest family on the continent thanked God that night.
